

Oxford Educational Foundation is Looking for Volunteers

Would you like to find another way to use your business expertise? Run a school store! Do you have an artistic side? Create a bulletin board! Maybe you just want to share a smile with kids as they meet a goal successfully. Then tutoring may be just the thing for you. Whether it is help with beginning Algebra, Chemistry, more practice reading, learning to organize school work, or help with an essay, volunteers, acting as classroom tutors and aides are being sought.

Visible in classrooms; senior citizens helping students with computer assignments, students reading to adults, chemistry students conducting experiments and presenting information to college students, and special needs students making use of equipment to help them better concentrate on lessons. And that's just the beginning. Mentors work one on one with students who just need a little guidance and attention from an interested adult. In the challenging economy, families, and therefore students, are more stressed. With a mentor with whom they can share their ups and downs, students are more likely to strive for success not only in the classroom, but in life.

Oxford Educational Foundation is seeking volunteers to serve as tutors, mentors, and classroom assistants in Oxford Area School. Tutors work on a regular basis with one or two students having problems in math, science or other subjects. Mentors meet on a regular basis with one student who seems to be in need of adult support and advice. Classroom assistants to enter classrooms and listen to students read or help the teacher with a variety of tasks to help meet the educational needs of the students.
